

Beyond any doubt, these days Capitalism is demolishing not only the society, sculpted by itself, but also the nature, in which it develops. No expertise is required to foresee a general breakdown of this capitalism in the near future, due to its “productivist” nature and the progressive consumption of energy and raw materials.

The State, contrary to general belief, is the key tool of the Capitalism for its expansion and for the reduction of the class struggle, produced by itself. This collapse will need to be controlled, to keep the “candy” of the “welfare state” which we had fallen on, and thus, the violence of its repressive force and coercion strategies will increase.

The aim of this II International Meeting on Social Ecology is to create a fruitful space for analysis and deliberation. These reflections would be the result of some specific experiences, historical and contemporary, close and remote, with the only purpose of designing and broadcasting a new political emancipatory model and a believable and tangible line of action, capable of agreement.
